

The Beds We Have Slept In

I remember the first time—I stayed in a hotel. I was eight and my dad sent me on a mission to find ice. I have been in love with hotels ever since. I even once slept with Paris Hilton—Who hasn't, right?—no not that Paris Hilton, the real Paris Hilton Hotel.

Indeed, I have always had a soft spot for hotels. And the grand hotel lobbies of the world too because they were a place where anything could happen and where you could meet someone who could change your financial and romantic destiny. The fact that I haven't had to buy shampoo or shower gel in decades is also a plus.

Anyway, we have stayed in well-over 150 hotels in over 80 countries spread across six continents around-the-world over the last fourteen editions of *The Global Scavenger Hunt*TM (TGSB).
